What is it like to be the Green Office Offline Community Coordinator?

Behind this long position title, you will find an amazing experience. As the Offline Community Coordinator I discover a world of possibilities. If you like variety, creativity and challenges this is the job for you. There was not a single day that looked the same during this incredible human roller coaster. Indeed, this whole position is based on human contact. You are responsible of creating a community of changemakers among students, staff and businesses.

As the Offline community coordinator, you are first of all in charge of recruiting and maintaining a constant high number of volunteers (45 +) throughout the year. These amazing people are essential to our organization by helping us run many of our different projects.

It is also your job to listen and reach out to people so you can understand how to bring sustainability to them in the most effective way. This translates in the organization of fun events such as Pub Quizzes, treasure hunts, Rooftop lunches, etc... But also in the organization of workshops with sustainability directors. The idea behind the workshops is to connect students and staff with the reality of sustainability outside a classroom. How are sustainability challenges tackled by companies of our everyday life? From Nespresso to Unilever, the possibilities are as endless as your community.

Lastly, you must remain approachable at all times. You will often be the first point of entry to sustainability for a big amount of people, and it is your responsibility to empower them through the Green Office.
